

Supervisor Meeting 1

Supervisor: Simon Perkins

Date: 24/02/21

Length: 1 hour

This was my very first supervisor meeting with Simon Perkins. It lasted just over an hour as we discussed my idea and rough story.

At the time of the meeting I was currently working on my script and I was having some trouble writing it. I told Simon that I was 5 pages into the script and that nothing had happened yet. I was still trying to set up the story. After hearing my problem Simon suggested that I tried a technique called in-media-res which is starting a film in the middle of its story. Adopting this technique would help me to tell the story faster and in a unique way.

Simon also suggested that I should try creating the story boards first then write the script. This was because it proved to be difficult coming up with the script first, then trying to fit the photos in after. This is an example of bricolage methodology.

Overall my first supervisor meeting was really helpful and I was able to get some great advice on how to manage my workflow.
